Customer Reviews

DNF 45% We met both Adam and Eliza May in the previous installment in the series. It's the beginning of their (love) story - as she lays dying after being attached, Daisy and Mary Chase find her and offer her an immortal life as a GIM. They call upon Adam who sees her and realizes she is the one who was promised to him so long ago. Taking his vow she is now eternally his, well, up until Sin and Will Thorne break her free. What exactly happened the time they spend together we know very little of, and frankly it doesn't even make any sense. He is happy she is by his side, but he is also a bit wary, he doesn't want to confide in her, yet he wants her to speak to him. She just sees a brooding annoying man who keeps her chained to his side so she gives him the "silence treatment" which annoys the heck out of him and in the end, when she finds her way out she is happy to finally be free. Eliza May has already been captured and enslaved in a certain way before she died, she was bound to Mellan. So when Adam chained her to him, for her it was twice giving away her freedom. On her first "trial" it was out of no choice since she had no one in her world back then, with Adam in a way it was also a no choice deal since she was already dead and didn't want to give her life away. It doesn't mean she willingly accepted that she is bound to him.. This is where the book begins, sort of, for the past year she has been free of Adam and living with her "aunt" (actually her grandmother) Mabella the Fae. You probably remember the mentally imbalanced Mab. I couldn't stand her in the previous installment so it's not wonder I still find her a total bore. Villains that are villains because they are "evil" have no appeal to me.
